

COUPLES' DINNER - 09 May 2014

By Rita Kiron

We had gathered for an evening of wine and dine at George & Dragon on 09 May, to celebrate an evening out with the husbands and friends. Coincidentally, it was also the Mothers' Day weekend. Hence the double celebration.

The guests started arriving at about 7.00pm and sat cozily around the tables. There were a few newcomers joining us for this dinner and we were introduced to each other. Good to see new and fresh faces. Once all were settled in, a lot of chatting and laughter was going on and as the time went by, it got louder. Some had really interesting and funny stories to tell. Laughter was heard all round and it was contagious. It turned out to be an evening of enjoyment.

First round the wine was on the house and soon enough the food was served. It was a lovely 4-course dinner.

Only 26 of us and it was good to get to know the new members, who came along with their husbands. It's at such occasions when one gets to know others better and keep the bonding of friendship going.

The ambience too played a part - the walls were decorated with a variety of historical artifacts - old knives, corkscrews and sugar tongs to ships' shields, old maps and tapestries. Interesting items.....and it did arouse some guests' curiosity.

All ended well, with some guests staying on till closing time. We had to be reminded of that.....and we left happily into the peaceful night.....with new friendships and some fond memories.....
