

Scavenger hunt in Taman Molek

By Hazel Oakley; Photos: Chiyono Oba, Eri Hanabusa & Anna Magyar

This month's coffee morning had a distinctly intrepid twist as we were sent on a scavenger hunt to discover the unique shops of Taman Molek as well as our regular cup of coffee.

About thirty of us gathered at Be Coffee in Taman Molek for our monthly catch-up. It was good to see old friends and to meet some new people too. Apparently the waffles at Be Coffee are famous, but their custard profiteroles were delicious too.

We weren't allowed to talk the morning away though! After we'd finished our coffee the committee gathered us up and evicted us onto the street in search of curious tiles, hidden post boxes, little details and interesting trifles amongst the Taman Molek shops. The scavenger hunt had about ten things to find or figure out from picture clues and clever wordplay. One of the funniest things was watching the ladies posing with Giant Motorbikes whilst the hardest thing to find was definitely the brass bell in a shop full of wooden furniture.

Some groups found it a lot easier than others, particularly those without high-heeled shoes or sweaty babies, but everyone certainly had fun. Despite being sent in five different directions we all ended up at T-blogger for a very refreshing iced tea or coffee afterwards.

I must say a big thank-you to the committee for arranging it. I'm sure it must have been a nightmare to organize! However, It was an extremely amusing way to spend a couple of hours and introduced us to the unique shops of the area.

